To all concerned:

I oppose any and all development and deployment of 'missile defense' systems in Ohio, Michigan, New York or any other U.S. State or Territories.

4-01-01

Here are my points of opposition:

Missile Defense / Surface-To-Air or any missile system that is offensive or defensive requires an infrastructure to support the missile complex that then becomes a danger and drain on the common good and public common wealth of any U.S. state, territory or military base communities:

4-01-02

1. Missile defense complexes and the public community around the missile complexes become a target for any enemy, foreign or domestic.

4-01-03

2. Public safety is endangered and environmental hazards are increased by the transporting of missile rocket stages, weapons payload, fuel, refueling, off-gasing of vapors as part of maintenance to keep missile systems operational.

4-01-04

3. Increase of military personnel, contractors, maintenance crews transporting heavy loads and equipment increase traffic and wear on public roads, increasing noise and toxic contaminants within their respective public area and community.

4-01-05

4-01-07

4. The cost of these systems is not justifiable. These missile systems are taking money away from improvements for our communities and society. We have been through the Cold War, and these proposed missile systems are part of a larger deployment strategy that is increasing geo-political tensions ever closer to a new arms race or war.

4-01-08

5. These missile complexes will increase public stress within communities that they are installed or near, not only because they represent an existential threat of war or attack, but by the very real threat of the potential for an accident or disaster.

4-01-09

I reject these proposed missile systems, and will ask my family and friends do the same for the reasons I have stated here.

4-01-10

Do include these comments as part of the EIS public comment record.

Jeff Kunz

To MDA:
I TOTALLY SUPPORT AND AGREE WITH EVERY WORD OF THE BELOW MESSAGE!

4-02-01

I am writing on behalf of our organization made up of peace groups around the world.

We strongly oppose the deployment of a Ground-Based Mid-Course Missile Defense system in any of the three locations now under consideration – Michigan, Ohio, or New York.

Our primary reason for opposing this so-called 'missile defense' (MD) system is that it is provocative and a key element in Pentagon first-strike attack planning. At the level of this current program US MD only has any real capability against limited retaliatory strikes after the US initiated a first-strike against Russia or China.

4-02-02

We know that the Space Command annually war games such a scenario – the red team verses the blue team – where the US launches such a first-strike and MD is used to pick off any retaliatory strikes. Thus this MD system is highly destabilizing and should not be deployed. (In fact this particular GBMD system has the least success in its testing program making it all the more a wasteful program.)

Beyond that our concerns also center around the outrageous waste of national resources as this boondoggle program would steal from badly needed programs in our social sector like education, health care, needed infrastructure repair, environmental clean-up and more. At the very time we are facing the reality of climate change these funds could be better used building rail, solar, wind power, and tidal power systems.

The environmental consequences of building such a deployment site would be massive. First there is the issue of the environmental damage from the construction process but there are other environmental concerns as well.

4-02-04

Particularly dangerous is the likely toxic rocket fuel contamination that would result as the fuel is trucked onto the site and then stored to fuel the interceptor missiles. All across the nation there is an epidemic from perchlorate contamination, a key component in rocket fuel. Somewhere between 20 million to 40 million Americans may be exposed to the chemical. We know that the CDC has found perchlorate in 100 percent of the people they've tested, so there's widespread exposure, through contaminated drinking water and also through contaminated food. The concern is that the fuel additive has seeped into the ground and water in dozens of states – that is how perchlorate has ended up in the drinking water and the food supply.

Clearly no matter where MDA chooses to deploy the GBMD system this issue of rocket fuel contamination and other environmental consequences will be a major sticking point.

4-02-06

Thus for all these reasons we highly recommend that the MDA make 'no decision' on this expensive, dangerous, and highly toxic program.

Good day and thank you very much,

You probably have recieved this last month, but if I may share again, this comment in a 3.5 hr. documentary form.

I'm from and based in New York, and give permission and welcome all sharing of this information on nuclear weapons, and some of those who've stood up to them.

I hope you find it worthy of it's length. Several groups have chosen to show it over two nights (two parts). Online, view it as you wish.

DVD's are available for group showings.

Too much money already goes to the military.
There are no credible nuclear opponents.

they just provide false hopes to the war hawks that they can with impunity provoke Russia and China.
The U.S. is already involved in too many foreign wars.
Perchlorate harms health.
Nuclear war harms the biosphere.

Dear fellow citizens and tax payers at Missile Defense Agency:

I do not support or agree with this project of building a third site for missile defense in our country. The environmental impact already is extremely grave due to our militarization of the planet. The US military is responsible for the largest carbon footprint of all. 4-08-01

This is not about United States security, it is about US domination of the world, suppression of democracy, and the the defense of immense profits for the benefit of a few. We the people, don't want the insane war machine to expand, we want it to shrivel on the vine, be drown in the bathtub of faith, hope and love. We want the money used to pursue endless war to be applied to human needs. It is a shame that the military/corporate/congressional complex holds no obligation whatsoever to us, to real truth, freedom, and democracy. It is about mass murder for profit, nothing more. 4-08-02

Thank you for your consideration,

The idea that such a system would actually work to stop an incoming nuclear missile, or that a midair collision with a nuclear missile would not entail radioactive contamination of the entire northern hemisphere and likely all of Earth, is insane. Not only that, but building such a system would only increase international tensions and the likelihood that someone will have a finger on a hair trigger.

I do not see the point of building a multi million dollar defense system in the area planned. First off what are the odds of a missile attacking this area when we already have effective anti missile areas. The government could be saving so much money and using that for a greater cause such as wetland improvement or use that money

As the article mentions, yes you can replace the environmental areas being destroyed by building new ones but you cant buiild a new forest that will allow those animals to go to that new area once their old home is destroyed. Taking away the animals homes can impact this area in the long run, so i just ask to step back and not think of this on the dollar side but of the environmental side and looking at the use of this expensive plan and how often it will be needed.

Dear Sirs,

I am opposed to adding a continental missile defense system. The military has indicated that money is better spent on upgrading and improving the systems we already have, as they are still lacking in reliability. If I might quote Adm Winnefield: "There's been a lot of talk of installing an East Coast missile field. However, the only reason to make that investment would be to provide the capability to shoot, assess and then shoot again. And we can only do that if we have the sensors we need in order to be able to do so. So we need to put our ability to see targets at the head of the line. . .", speech at Center for Strategic and International Studies on May 19, 2015.

This is a multibillion dollar taxpayer boondoggle and a complete waste of our tax dollars. It was inserted by House and Senate members whose congressional districts will benefit from the waste. I tire of paying taxes on unneeded, unwanted and unproven technologies. We need fiscal discipline and this is a mere income transfer from one group to another, i.e. from all the congressional districts' taxpayers to the one that will get the award.

I strongly oppose building a Ground-Based Mid-Course Missile "Defense" system in New York, Ohio, Michigan, or anywhere else on earth.

5-01-01

These missiles are a highly provocative part of the U.S. arms race, taken as hostile by Russia and China. Arguments in Washington, D.C., for a militarized defense against a supposed Russian threat were rejected by a senior Pentagon officer in Politico on May 12, 2016, in these terms:

5-01-02

"The Army is looking for a purpose, and a bigger chunk of the budget. And the best way to get that is to paint the Russians as being able to land in our rear and on both of our flanks at the same time. What a crock."

Bureaucracy and profiteering are not sufficient justification for constructing these counterproductive systems, which will endanger rather than protect us, damage the natural environment, and waste huge sums of money needed for useful projects that answer legitimate human needs.

Honestly, the Cold War is OVER. We really don't need to resurrect the military buildup against Russia. Our military budget already exceeds the COMBINED total of the next seven nations. None is going to surreptitiously build an attack against US lands.

Rocket boosters like those used on U.S. missiles expel huge amounts of CO2 into the atmosphere.

From an environmental perspective this would be detrimental to and go against the internationally agreed upon pact the U.S. signed in Paris late last year.

We don't need more missiles. We need to do everything in our power to stop the burning of fossil fuels in all forms if we are to survive the unfolding climate crisis. Please, do the right thing.

I object to CIS placements being considered for OH, MI and NY and recommend the "no action" alternative be adopted. These sites cannot be justified as the rationale for them states Iran and North Korea. Iran's "nuclear threat" is being addressed diplomatically; N. Korea is not a credible threat and would best be addressed diplomatically. Kim Il Jong is dying for somebody important to talk to him. Another reason against CIS is that there is too great of a possibility that convenient-to-use, dual-yield warheads being planned under the Strillion, 30-year "nuclear revitalization program" will end up on these interceptors. Furthermore, plans for never testing from these sites greatly reduces confidence in their reliability.

It has to do more with PROFIT and greed than with "defense." Our country presently possesses the most powerful military machine in human history. Potentially, the war-making we inspire almost everywhere in the world, could destroy us. We do not wish this for ourselves, our children or posterity. It is shameful and tragic where we are headed.

It should be clear by now - more than half a century after Dwight Eisenhower spoke about the military industrial complex, that powerful men with business interests have commandeered much of the public's right to self governance, in the name of security. 5-20-01

Weapons sales globally are strong, and when governments listen to these interests more than their citizenry (who they ultimately are responsible for) there is little incentive to wage peace instead of war, because war is more profitable than peacetime. Heck, if we had extended periods with no conflict, who would buy weapons and expensive military hardware? Instead, governments would be investing in infrastructure, schools, and the future. When the military industrial complex holds sway, foreign policy becomes a game of instilling fears about the aims of other nations - who themselves have those who's interests are not served by peace as much as war. Endless cycles of violence and arms races ensue, because no-one wants to take a risk and hold out an olive branch.

And so it goes, we spend an increasing amount of our military capability, and less on the elements that will actually create a more prosperous and healthy future for the rest of us, who do not feed from the trough of government contracts. 5-20-02

Please stop this madness.
Thank-you.

The kind of war this type of defense system is designed to fight is not winnable for any of the nations big enough to participate. The people of the world as a whole are too close to the edge of sustainable life as it is due to climate change and rampant profiteering that's tearing up and trashing the ecosystem that keeps our planet habitable.

5-24-01

The money should go instead to the repair and retrofitting of our infrastructure for a more modest (and more human) way of life. It should go towards social and environmental justice. Towards lessening the likelihood of catastrophic conflicts between peoples instead of moving us towards such earth shattering conflicts.

5-24-02

Born in Fort Worth, TX, back when it was known as Cow Town two weeks before the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, I've seen enough saber rattling, more than enough of our nation's people and the people of the world killed and maimed by war, the civilian casualties rising and rising, the conflict metastasizing and melding into the fabric of our everyday lives with terrorist threats, cyber threats, failed states, failed strategies, the movement towards robotic armies, the targeting of power grids and other infrastructure essential to civilian life.

5-24-03

So no, no more missile sites.

We can 'never, ever have really affordable healthcare', but burning money and risking nuclear war is, apparently, just fine for politicians who'd rather invent threats and create enemies than deal with real problems, like poor infrastructure, climate change or lack of affordable housing.

5-26-01

To pretend that we need nukes or nuclear defense, or that there's a nuclear threat coming from outside, or that nuclear war can be won - is a game that can only lead to global catastrophe. The only threat we have is the US government's mad propaganda charade of arms race that is putting the whole planet in peril.

What difference can it make how old they are.

I am opposed to building any additional missile sites, in the US or elsewhere. There is no military purpose to be served by adding to our missile defense system. This is just a ploy by the Army to increase their budget and is a huge waste of money. It is also a further provocation to Russia, against whom these missiles are aimed.

5-39-01

We need to spend all available funds dealing not with the phantom threat of an all our unprovoked missile attack from Russia, or any other country, but with the very real and growing threat of climate change. I send you the rejection of arguments for a militarized defense against a supposed Russian threat by a senior Pentagon officer in Politico on May 12, 2016:

"The Army is looking for a purpose, and a bigger chunk of the budget. And the best way to get that is to paint the Russians as being able to land in our rear and on both of our flanks at the same time. What a crock."

The default response to "Defense" initiatives must be "No." Our "defense" budget is greater than the next eight countries combined. That includes the other four permanent members of the UN Security Council, which along with the US are also the four largest sellers of weapons to the rest of the world. And, two of them, Britain and France, are our allies. The B2's mission, at $2B each, was to fly into the Soviet Union after a total nuclear exchange and take out the few remaining targets. It doesn't get more absurd than that. Removing the A-10 for the F-35 is also absurd. The purveyors of more, more, more "defense" spending are liars and evil. The argument that Obama has made us weak is a lie. The decisions for "defense" must be taken out of the hands of those who profit greatly from the weapons systems.

These missiles should not be built; they will be able to carry nuclear bombs and they are a highly provocative part of the U.S. arms race. We should be focused on driving down our nuclear war capabilities and in particular, those of India and Pakistan.

, taken as hostile by Russia and China. Arguments in Washington, D.C., for a militarized defense against a supposed Russian threat were rejected by a senior Pentagon officer in Politico on May 12, 2016, in these terms:

5-70-02

"The Army is looking for a purpose, and a bigger chunk of the budget. And the best way to get that is to paint the Russians as being able to land in our rear and on both of our flanks at the same time. What a crock."

The Russian threat is nonsense. It is no way to build a sustainable economy, society and global environment.

Why not redirect the huge sums of money needed for useful projects e.g. public housing, public libraries, public health, public education through college, public transportation, repair of tunnels and other public services that facilitate mass transportation—all legitimate common good needs.

Many of us boomer college educated Americans have worked all our lives to TEACH, PROMOTE AND ESTABLISH PEACE. The Pentagon and the military budget need massive reductions. The US military should be protecting our environment, rebuilding infrastructure and taking care of veterans...not wanting to create more illusions of security. We need OUT OF ALL ONGOING WARS. This is a new era and the old ways of the military need to go by the wayside. In light of what happened in Orlando, FL this week, I hope whoever reads this will rethink this ridiculous idea of establishing missiles in my heartland home state of OHIO, my state of former residence NEW YORK, and the great state of MICHIGAN. LOVE THESE STATES, THEIR PEOPLE, AND WE DON'T NEED OR WANT MISSILES THERE. Read Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's warning back in the 1950's re: the buildup of the military industrial complex (CON PLEX).

Building this form of defense is perceived as a hostile move by countries which could potentially be framed as our enemies. Senior pentagon officers have spoken out against the efficacy of such an expenditure, clarifying that an investment in missiles of this sort would be a ploy on the part of the army to claim more of the national budget. Our nation has plenty other problems to contend with at the moment and many other uses for our hard won tax base, we don't need to go creating problems which will require more of our resources to attempt to solve them.

But, putting them in Eastern Europe especially bothers me. Over 50 years ago, we almost went to war because the Russians (USSR) put missiles in Cuba. The problem is that putting the missiles close to their potential targets drastically reduces the flight and hence warning times. The Russians will worry, rightly or wrongly, that we are trying to build a first strike capability to wipe out their missiles before they could respond. Fortunately, back then, the Russian leadership, all of whom had seen World War II up close and personal, realized how provocative this was and removed the missiles. I can only hope that our leaders are as wise as they were.

Because more bombs, guns or missiles is never a good answer. It will undoubtedly provoke a response by building the next generation of weapons that can defeat such systems. Wasn't one arms race enough? We both participated, so let's not go to the dance this time, certainly not start it. If the shoe were on the other foot and China was militarizing (oh yeah, it is), wouldn't that make us nervous? It does, so let's de-escalate not participate. Yes we need strong defenses, but not provocative ones.

I believe these sites constitute a thorough waste of money, besides being a provocation in this world of violence. I do not believe that they represent in any way protection from violence. I urge a truly peaceful policy that does not rely on military options for our best defense. Building a just world of respect for others has always been a better defense than anything military might can achieve. In fact the wars of the past grew out of military confrontation, with war leading to more war. Until we have policies beyond the threat of war we will ourselves be a source of endangerment to ourselves.

I join thousands of concerned citizens in strongly opposing any building of any Ground-Based Mid-Course Missile "Defense" system in New York, Ohio, Michigan, or anywhere else on earth.

This is a misguided and dangerous foreign policy. Missiles represent, to people around the world, a highly provocative part of the U.S. arms race, and understandably represent an aggressive and hostile intention of the US by Russia and China.

Unsubstantiated rationale for missile systems put forward for a militarized defense against an unsubstantiated Russian threat were critiqued and roundly rejected by a senior Pentagon officer in Politico on May 12, 2016, in these terms:

"The Army is looking for a purpose, and a bigger chunk of the budget. And the best way to get that is to paint the Russians as being able to land in our rear and on both of our flanks at the same time. What a crock."

Bureaucracy and profiteering are not only insufficient justification for constructing these counterproductive systems, which will endanger rather than protect us, they will increase international tensions, increase the likelihood of war.

5-151-03

These missiles, if allowed, would additionally damage the natural environment, and waste huge sums of tax payers' money that would much more wisely be allocated for useful projects that answer the many unfunded legitimate needs of communities and their citizens.

I'm thoroughly disgusted with the Congressional and Administrative Branches of the USA Federal Government for endlessly ramping up military expenditures, war-posturing, and rationalizing evermore creative reasons why we should bomb other nations into submission both to our will and the exploitation of the top 1% of our citizens! Our nation has become a threat to the survival of humanity, with its self-serving, oligarchical policies and disdain for the global community and environment.

The military approach toward "international relations" is self-defeating, deadly, and draining our citizens of all hope of a decent quality of life. The actions of the evil, powerful complex turn upside down lessons taught to America's youth in schools supported by the tax dollars of overworked citizens. To claim that the military installations are for "defense" is ludicrous. With its nearly thousand bases worldwide, the US is a worldwide aggressor. The United States would not tolerate a foreign country building a military base base on our land, not would it permit bases to be built on it borders. Yet, the US builds bases within other countries and, under the guise of NATO sens warships close to others' borders. We citizens are at the mercy of rogue political and economic forces. Why do we need to be so aggressive, when, in fact, we are way overextended? Is it even halfway reasonable, let alone wise? Aren't we unintentionally encouraging Russia and China and others, in any combination, to join forces and at least neutralize us?

Many see us as an archetypical playground bully; well, aren't we? Have any of you heard the expression "Let's you and him fight"? Imagine the bluster of President Trump or whoever the next 'crazy' might be, if he or she decided the US was 'safe' from attack because of this system. In fact, we know that there are no certainties except death and taxes, so let's spend those taxes on promoting LIFE and not solely on death.

Imagine for even a few seconds all the problems in this country that would be solved if our military budget was about $300 billion less every year. We would still be more than most of the rest of the world combined, but maybe we could educate and provide health care for our people and truly deal with global warming. Maybe voting for humanity and the citizens you represent could be a goal for the rest of your term in office.

Missile "defense" depends on notoriously inaccurate missiles suddenly acquiring the capability of shooting down other nation's missiles in mid-air, when those missiles can defend against our missiles easily (and inexpensively) with reflective paint or Mylar balloons as decoys. Furthermore, we know that "successful" missile defense tests are generally rigged so that they're impossible to fail! And what do missile "defense" proponents say when confronted with all of this evidence? Just launch more missiles at the incoming missile -- which, surely, our opponents would never think off! || 5-230-02

Bureaucracy and profiteering are not sufficient justification for constructing these counterproductive systems, which will endanger rather than protect us, damage the natural environment, and waste huge sums of money needed for useful projects that answer legitimate human needs. My RAND (1956-59) colleagues had already studied that problem and concluded (satirically) that it would take enormous rockets mounted horizontally on the Andes at the equator to be "fired" upon warning, thereby making ballistic missiles not only miss their targets (via the increase or decrease in the Earth's rotation -- depending on which side of the Andes they had been horizontally mounted) but would be augmented by "collateral damage by large chunks of the earth's surface being released via the disruption in the Earth's rotation -- and this analysis was the "only realistic anti-ballistic missile system physically possible".

There is no excuse whatsoever for launching another nuclear arms race, which is precisely what this will help to expedite. People do not seem to realize we were almost fantastically lucky to get through the Cold War without a nuclear war - this cannot be emphasized enough. There simply are no rational grounds for trying to provoke the Russians, or letting them provoke us, into this nightmare dance again. It cannot end well.

Please do not let this happen!

Kevin Mathewson
